For senior high students and their guidance office

A private place to check in with yourself.

HingaWeb helps you notice how you are doing and connects you to your school's guidance office when you want support. It is not a diagnosis, and it is not a replacement for talking to someone.

How HingaWeb works

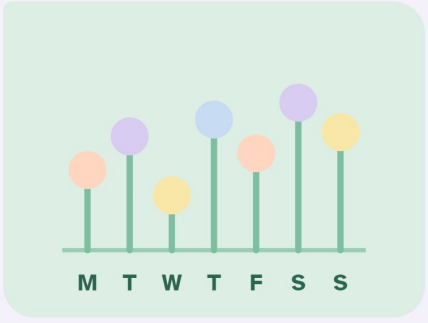

You go at your own pace. Nothing happens unless you choose it.

First

Check in with yourself

Answer a few short questions about your mood, sleep and stress. It takes a couple of minutes.

Then

Notice your patterns

See how your week has been going, so it is easier to name what you are feeling.

Whenever you're ready

Talk to your guidance office

Send a request to see a counselor when you want to talk. You decide if and when.

Hinga muna.
Take one slow minute.

When things feel heavy, a few slow breaths can help you settle enough to notice what you need. Follow the shape: it grows as you breathe in and shrinks as you breathe out.
